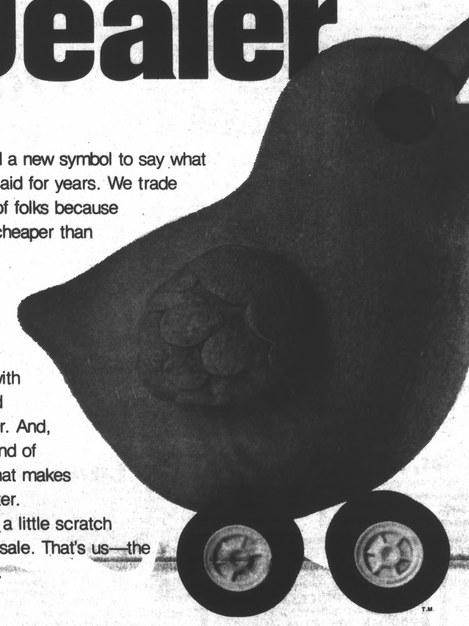
The Little Cheeper Dealer



We've hatched a new symbol to say what our customers have said for years. We trade a lot of cars to a lot of folks because we try to sell a little cheaper than our competitors.

Not so cheap that you don't get your money's worth, but cheap enough so that you're satisfied with a good car for a good value—year after year. And, of course, with our kind of mother hen service that makes a good deal even better.

Great cars for a little scratch and service after the sale. That's us—the Little Cheeper Dealer.

New horse awards program started by Charlottesville man

BLACKSBURG - A Charlottesville real estate executive has given added impetus to Virginia's 4-H horse program by sponsoring a new major awards program.

John H. Royer Jr., president of Royer and McGeveck Realtors Ltd., will provide $2,000 a year to implement the program and honor the 4-H winners.

Royer is a long-time supporter of youth work as well as being a state and national leader in the livestock industry, said Arden N. Huff, Virginia Tech Extension horse specialist.

"This support has given the state 4-H program a tremendous boost," Huff said. "It provides additional incentives for excellence as well as giving recognition to those 4-H'ers with outstanding accomplishments."

Each of six district 4-H horse project achievement winners will receive $300 awards for use in their projects or to further their education. The awards will be presented at a September luncheon at the Boar's Head Inn in Charlotesville.

One of the six district winners will be named state champion and will represent Virginia in the national competition at the 4-H Club Congress in Chicago in early December.

The Charlottesville program will include reports by the six winners and an educational program on the horse farm real estate business and related career opportunities.

Berkley Gray Jr. of Staunton, past president of the Virginia Horse Council who was instrumental in formulating the program, will be master of ceremonies. Royer will conduct the real estate portion of the program while Barbara Baird of Aldie will lead the record book instruction.

Virginia 4-H horse project members have until Aug. 1 to submit to a local Extension office their accumulated achievement record books for judging in the state competition. Evangeline Swain, Tech 4-H Extension leader, is in charge of the records book awards program.

Additional information concerning the program can be obtained at a local Extension office.

With a membership that ranges between 6,000 and 10,000, the Virginia 4-H horse educational program is considered to be among the most active and successful in the nation. Emphasis is on youth development, leadership, citizenship, horse science and horsemanship. The state program, under the leadership of Huff, also involves numerous Extension agents and more than 500 volunteer leaders across the state.

Highway department has new programmer

Joseph G. Ripley, former urban engineer and now right-of-way engineer for the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation, has been promoted to director of planning and programming, the department said today.

Ripley, a 54-year-old native of Buchanan, succeeds Oscar K. Mabry, who was recently named deputy commissioner for the department.

In his new position, Ripley will coordinate the agency's urban, secondary roads, programming and scheduling, and transportation planning divisions.

He was graduated from Virginia Military Institute with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering in 1950, and joined the department's graduate engineer training program the same year.

He took an 18-month leave to serve in the army during the Korean War in 1951, and returned to complete the training program in 1954. He was then assigned as the department's assistant resident engineer at Lebanon in Russell County, and was promoted to resident engineer at Chatham three years later.

Ripley also worked briefly as resident engineer at Christiansburg in 1964 before becoming assistant urban engineer in the department's central office in Richmond.

He was named head of the urban division in 1972, coordinating the department's relations with municipalities throughout Virginia, and then became head of the right-of-way division last November.

Ripley is a member of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials.

He is married to the former Mary Jack Haskins of Callands, and they are the parents of a son and a daughter.
